Dear Ms. Monteith:

Pursuant to the Public Notice issued on January 30, 2006, attached is Socket Telecom, LLC's ("Socket") Certificate of Compliance with the FCC's CPNI rules.

As I will explain further, Socket's business practices and operating procedures ensure compliance with the FCC's rules. Socket does not sell or otherwise provide CPNI information to third-parties, including agents or joint-venture partners. When using CPNI information internally and between affiliates, Socket relies upon the "opt-in approval" methodology where Socket obtains affirmative consent prior to using any CPNI information in instances where approval is required. Socket has trained its personnel as to when they are or are not authorized to use CPNI. Socket clearly tracks the status of a customer's CPNI approval that is reviewed prior to any use of CPNI. Socket does have a disciplinary process in place if CPNI information is used without proper authorization.

To date, Socket has not used CPNI information as part of any sales and marketing campaign. In the event that Socket does so in the future, Socket will keep the necessary records including identifying the specific CPNI information used in the campaign and the products and services offered as part of the campaign. In the event that Socket engages in an outbound marketing campaign to obtain approval for use of CPNI, Socket will adhere to the applicable rules. Any such campaign will require supervisory approval of any proposed outbound marketing request.

Socket has established these and other business practices and operating procedures to ensure compliance with the FCC's CPNI rules. In the event additional information is necessary, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,
